Table of UN Resolutions

1 Table of Cases, etc

The Table of Cases, Table of Statutes, etc, are indexes and can be generated in various ways.

Using imakeidx package, invoke it with the splitindex option.

\usepackage[splitindex]{imakeidx}

For each Table, define it with makeindex.
Pre-defined jurisdictional categories (see the documentation) can be fed to the Table with DeclareIndexAssociation.

\makeindex[name=cases, title={Table of Cases}]
\DeclareIndexAssociation{encases}{cases}

Alternatively, a bibentry with a ... `tabulate={unres}, ...` field will send the item to the `unres` index.

\makeindex[name=unres, title={Table of UN Resolutions},columns=1]

Set biblatex option `indexing=cite,`.
Print the indexes at the start of the document with:

\citetrackerfalse
\printindexearly[cases]
\printindexearly[unres]
\citetrackertrue

Run latex, biber, latex, latex, splitindex, latex, splitindex, latex.
As each component is inserted into the document, page numbers used by cross-references will change, so they need to "settle".

US Supreme Court legal lipsum: In deciding when to ignore the requirements of the clear statement rule, the Court also considers the extent to which citizens have relied on our past decisions. This analysis looks to the reliance of the employees who may be without a remedy if FELA does not apply to their state employers. From the standpoint of the States, however, the Court ignores the fact that we generally do not assume States waive their right to challenge an abrogation of their traditional authority just because they have acquiesced in, or even relied on, longstanding congressional regulation. See Welch, 483 U. S., at 473 (constructive consent to suit not sufficient). The "reliance" exception to the clear statement rule thus reinstates a theory of constructive waiver of sovereign immunity that our cases have repeatedly rejected. See ibid.; Atascadero State Hospital v. Scanlon, 473 U. S., at 241, 246–247; Port Authority Trans-Hudson Corp. v. Feeney, 495 U. S. 299, 306 (1990).

In sum, the Court's newly created exception to the clear statement rule threatens to eliminate it altogether, except when the States' Eleventh Amendment sovereign immunity is abrogated in federal court. It will be difficult, if not impossible, for lower courts to know when they should apply the rule in interpreting statutes that upset the traditional balance between the State and Federal Governments outside the context of Eleventh Amendment immunity.

    — Hilton v. South Carolina Public Railways Commission, 502 US 197, 211-212 (1991)
